Burials 1813 - 2002

The burial registers for St Mary's Church, Eaton Socon include some burials that took place in Eaton Socon Cemetery. Where a person was buried in the cemetery and a record made in the church burial registers it has been noted in this booklet.

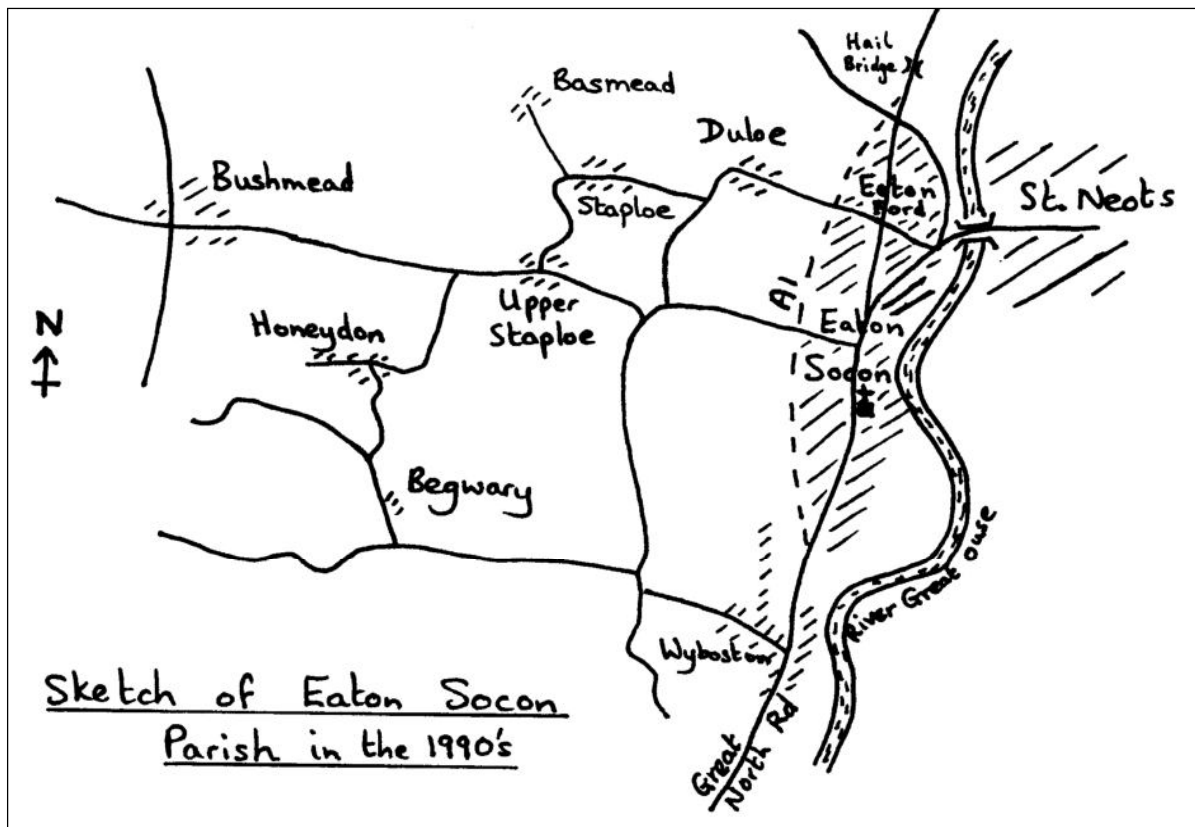

Eaton Socon Parish has only two burial grounds - the churchyard around the church and a cemetery a few hundred yards away which opened in 1930. Although there are chapels in several of the hamlets there are no other burial grounds.

In the early 1960s ashes were placed below the East Window where there are now many cremation memorials. Early numbering of this area was listed in the registers as 1/12 for example – being Row 1 plot 12. This numbering has since been replaced by the numbering in the survey of the churchyard memorials (see 'St Mary's Parish Church, Eaton Socon Monumental Inscriptions c1400 – 1999').

In 1989 a circular garden of remembrance was opened for ashes on the north side of the church. The plots are numbered A1, A2, A3 etc. in the burial register.

Eaton Socon - A Parish in Three Counties Bedfordshire, Huntingdonshire and Cambridgeshire

Nineteenth and twentieth century Directories of Bedfordshire state that 'Eaton Socon is an extensive parish on the borders of Huntingdonshire'. The area of the parish was over 7,000 acres and the population was around 2,000. The Great North Road running from London to Edinburgh ran through the village of Eaton Socon. The parish church was in Eaton Socon village (sometimes referred to as Eaton Town) and the hamlets included in the parish were Basmead, Begwary, Bushmead, Duloe, Eaton Ford, Honeydon, Staploe, Upper Staploe, Wyboston and several outlying farms.

During the latter half of the twentieth century great changes have taken place around the original village areas of Eaton Socon and Eaton Ford. The A1 road, opened in 1971 to replace the old Great North Road, effectively split the old parish. Since then the village areas of Eaton Socon and Eaton Ford have seen extensive house building. Now sadly, there are very few fields between the A1 and the river but in the rest of the parish the fields and hamlets remain.

In the last forty years the county boundaries have also changed. In 1965 the villages of Eaton Socon and Eaton Ford joined with St Neots, across the river. The villages were now part of Huntingdonshire. When Huntingdonshire was merged with Cambridgeshire the residents could truly say that in a space of a few years they had lived in three counties while still living in the same house! Meanwhile the old ecclesiastical parish remains (with the exception of Wyboston which moved out of Eaton Socon parish in 1999) and those residents in the hamlets and farms to the west of the A1 still remain in Bedfordshire.
